Productivity revolution in sight

"The most important contribution of the 20th century was to increase the productivity of manual workers fifty times.

The most important contribution during the 21st century will be to increase the productivity of intellectual workers – hopefully by the same percentage."

— Peter Drucker

Communication goes de-siloed

“The most important contribution of management in the 20th century was to increase manual worker productivity fifty-fold. The most important contribution of management in the 21st century will be to increase knowledge worker productivity – hopefully by the same percentage.”

So annoying!

A close-up photograph of a person's hands typing on a laptop keyboard. The scene is dimly lit, with the primary light source coming from the laptop screen, which casts a soft glow on the keys and the person's fingers. The person is wearing a dark-colored zip-up jacket. The background is mostly black, making the hands and the keyboard the central focus of the image.

Communication Goes De-Siloed

Breaking barriers for better collaboration

- Defining De-siloed Communication

Information flow beyond internal and external barriers

Why Siloed Communication Fails

- Slower decision-making
- Limited collaboration
- Missed opportunities for innovation
